'ROUND 'N' 'ROUND

Here's one question which we bet Einstein can't answer:

• • • •

Why is it that some fiend always has to leave a chair in the middle of the room so that when one wakes up in the morning and goes to answer the door bell, one is sure to bark a shin or stub a toe against it?

• • • •

And another question we would like to ask is: Why doesn't swearing make the toe or shin feel better?

• • • •

Feeling blue yesterday—quite blue. You know the symptoms that come upon a man all of a sudden. Makes one wonder whether life is worth while and all that rot.

• • • •

And then we bumped into an aged couple coming down the avenue. The man was leading the woman by the hand. We could see with one glance that she was blind.

• • • •

A friend with us knew the couple, and as they walked away, he told me the story.

• • • •

Years ago, so it seems, a short year after the couple married, the husband returned home from work and found that his wife was seriously ill.

• • • •

Blindness came upon her suddenly, without warning.

• • • •

For years he slaved to make enough money to take her to specialists.

• • • •

And every one of them pronounced her case as incureable.

• • • •

For 20 years now, husband and wife have been living together. There are no children. He has a small income, just large enough for them to live upon.

• • • •

He constantly takes care of her—waiting upon her—feeding her—cooking—keeping the house. And at night he reads to her. And she sees the world through his eyes.

• • • •

Just think of it—20 years together.—20 years of toil of sacrifice—

• • • •

Loyalty and love. And love is not love if there aren't sacrifices.

• • • •

They tell me that both are happy and content. I've never seen the couple but what they were smiling—and happy.

• • • •

Your troubles may always be large—but cheer up and smile, buddy—the other fellow's luck is twice as bad as yours.

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND IN TOMALES DISASTER

9 DROWNED WHEN BOAT SINKS

DILLON'S BEACH, Dec. 19.—UP—An incoming tide tonight helped the large group of volunteers who were trying to recover bodies of nine men, women and children drowned when their small launch capsized Thursday.

Late this afternoon the body of Mrs. Helen Frease was washed ashore.

It was believed she was the woman Ornburn Gray, 25, had tried to rescue while swimming toward the beach after his boat had also overturned. Gray was several hundred yards from his goal when a heavy wave swept him against a rock, breaking three of his ribs and forcing him to release his grip on the woman.

Names Given

He said that as she went down she shouted "thank you for trying to save me."

Others [illegible] were believed to [illegible] his wife, Mrs. Marie Frease, his brother, Jack, and the latter's wife, Mrs. Helen Frease, two brothers, Daniel and Manuel Augustine and three children of the latter, Gertrude 16, Virginia 17, and Daniel 13.

For a time Coast Guard officials feared the death toll might mount to 13, but four relatives of the two families were located safe in homes of friends after a prolonged search for them.

Brothers Praised

Ornburn Gray and his brother, Grant, 21, received praise today for their heroism in attempting a rescue, which failed through no fault of their own.

When the Helen, 26 foot cabin launch owned by Tony Frease, turned turtle after its engine was disabled, Ornburn and Grant daringly put out in a smaller boat.

The brothers reached the upset launch while some of its passengers were still floundering in the high waves, fighting against a strong outgoing current at the mouth of Tomales bay. They were so frightened that they clutched wildly at the little rescue boat and swamped it.

Ornburn Gray said he believed all might have been saved if they had held on to the hull of their own boat and permitted his brother and himself to pull the craft ashore.

New Viceroy Of India Appointed

LONDON, Dec. 19. —UP— Viscount Willingdon, governor of Canada, was appointed Viceroy of India today, to succeed Lord Irwin.

The post is that of personal representative of the king, and Viscount Willingdon will live in ergal fashion as viceroy.

Lord Willingdon's appointment had been expected. His term as governor general would have expired next August, and Lord Irwin's would have expired in April. It is customary for a viceroy to serve five years, though this period is a traditional one only, somewhat corresponding to that which says no president of the United States shall serve more than two terms. The five year limit has been broken only once, when Lord Hardinge served from November 1910 to April 1916. However, the extension in his case was due to the world war.

Lord Willingdon has been governor general of Canada since 1926, previously he had had long experience in India, as governor of Bombay and in other capacities.

Negro Confesses Teacher Attack

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Dec. 19.—UP—The confessed negro murderer of a young white school teacher was held in solitary confinement and under heavy guard in jail here tonight while preparations for his trial were hastened.

The negro, Raymond Gunn, 30, a former convict, was brought here after he admitted attacking Velma Colter, 19, and beating and choking her to death in a rural school near Marysville, late Tuesday.

Gunn told with no display of emotion how he lurked in a clump of bushes near the school house until the pupils had gone home and then ran in and seized the teacher as she was banking a fire in the stove for the night.

The young woman put up a desperate struggle for her life, and once forced her assailant to retreat with a deep bite on the hand. The negro felled her with a blow on the head and then beat her mercilessly with a club while on the floor she lay begging for her life.

Plaster impressions were made of foot marks found in the mud and the negro was arrested. The footprints were found to be his. Gunn had served a penitentiary sentence for an assault on a young white girl several years ago.

MAX BAER LOSES DECISION TO SCHAAF IN N.Y. BOUT

SMALL CROWD SEES COAST MAN LOSE

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—UP—Incessant chatter of Max Baer, California heavyweight, was reduced to a mere whisper here tonight when Ernie Schaff of Boston scored an easy ten round decision over the coast battler.

The decision of the two judges and of Referee Johnny McAvoy was unanimous. The boxing writers concurred in the official verdict.

Baer weighed 200 pounds and Schaaf 203. Baer failed to live up to the elaborate promises made for himself, by himself, and by his legion of west coast enthusiasts.

He himself, had predicted a knockout victory.

Schaaf made good his own prediction for he figured himself good to win by a decision.

Baer, failing to score a triumph in his first eastern appearance, showed that he is a real fighter

CHARITY SPORT CONTESTS HELD PROFITABLE

CHICAGO, Dec. 19.—"Charity" sport promotions have proved so profitable to Chicago promoters and athletes that continuance of benefit programs is assured—at least until a means is devised to assure charity an appreciable share of the receipts.

George Getz, chairman of the Illinois State Unemployment commission, has called upon sport patrons to contribute $500,000 for charity, with the money to be raised through charity boxing, wrestling, basketball and football matches.

The charity programs have been divided:

Event—	Gross Receipts	Charity's Share
Griffiths-Stribling boxing match	$ 88,000	$ 5,000
Bears-Cards indoor football game	15,000	2,000
Intersectional football game	*100,000	10,000
U. of C. basketball game	11,000	10,000

*Estimated.

Promoters have responded eagerly to Getz's call and many charity programs have been staged. Numerous others are planned, and the future attractions are staged on the same basis as their predecessors the public will have contributed many millions of dollars for promoters and athletes before completion of the $500,000 fund ends "charity" programs.

The "charity racket" always has carried a strong appeal for fighters and boxing promoters, but promoters of other sports apparently are becoming educated to the benefits of "charity" shows.

Fighters always are eager to appear on "charity" cards because these shows enjoy tax immunities, which increase net receipts, upon which their percentages are based. The charity appeal also results usually in increased gate receipts over the normal drawing power of the match and gives the promoters an excuse to increase admission prices and curtail free admissions.

Tom Thumb Fish Courses For L. A.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 19. —UP— Trout fishing in the heart of Los Angeles is the latest sport innovation.

On the very spot at Fairfax and Wilshire where the miniature golf craze started a trout fishing pool is nearing completion and will open Sunday with 2,500 trout ready to be caught by fishermen, expert and amateur.

The fish may be caught, cleaned and cooked on the spot. If equipment is furnished the fee will be fifty cents and three fish for $1.00. If the fisherman brings his own equipment, the only charge is for the number of fish caught.

The enterprise is named the Wilshire Mountain Trout company, Ltd., composed of a group who claim to have a monopoly on 5,000,000 trout, said to comprise most of the fresh water trout in the state of California. The pool is built on the property of Ruth Roland, former motion picture actress who became wealthy in real estate dealings.

The first "Tom Thumb" golf course, started by "Cowboy" Gillespie and his bride gross $102,000 in six months on the same location. Miss Roland and her associates expect the trout fishing pool to exceed this sum in less time.

On outlay of $20,000 is involved in the venture. The pool is 150 by 50 feet and is 4 feet deep. Water will be pumped over specially constructed falls into the pool at the rate of 1,000 gallons per minute.

Two thousand five hundred fresh trout, ranging in size from 7 1-2 to 14 inches in length and from half a pound to a pound and a half in weight, will be placed in the pool daily. The fish will be brought in oxygen tanks, a new creation, from Forest Home, the largest fish hatchery in California which is 96 miles from Los Angeles.

DRY LAW TEST WAS MADE IN MARCH, 1920

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—UP—Elihu Root, famous lawyer, presented to the supreme court on March 8, 1920, an argument against the validity of the Eighteenth amendment similar in principle to the decision of Federal Judge William Clark of New Jersey in holding the amendment invalid.

The court on the following June 7 handed down its decision upholding the validity of the amendment and the general features of the Volstead enforcement act. The decision announced without a formal opinion explaining the court's reasoning, disposed of controversial issues raised in seven different cases, all in favor of prohibition's validity.

All the court had to say on the [illegible] of the manufacture, sale, transportation, importation and exportation of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes, as embodied in the Eighteenth amendment, is within the power to amend reserved by Article V of the constitution.

"That amendment, by lawful proposal and ratification, has become a part of the constitution, and must be respected and given effect the same as other provisions of that instrument."

Two of the cases were brought by the states of Rhode Island and New Jersey in their sovereign capacities. Four others were appealed by liquor producers and dealers, and Root represented one of these. One was appealed to the supreme court by the government the eastern Wisconsin federal district court having granted an injunction forbidding federal enforcement as to intrastate liquor dealings.

Root's interesting argument, which is being re-read today by thousands of lawyers and prohibition and anti-prohibition protagonists, was based partly on the contention that ratification by state legislatures does not as a matter of fact provide an opportunity for the people to express their will regarding the proposed Eighteenth amendment as the calling of conventions might have done.

"Thus, for example," says the court's official "U. S. reports", in summarizing his argument, "the Missouri legislature ratified it, notwithstanding an express provision of the Missouri constitution forbidding them so to do, and in Ohio ratification by the legislature was subsequently rejected by the people at the polls, while in other states the people have been denied all right to have the question of ratification referred to them for approval."

Root quoted Alexander Hamilton as saying "the fundamental maxim of Republican government "requires that the sense of the majority should prevail," and said that upholding this amendment would do violence to this axiom. He calculated that 5 percent of the nation's population in 13 states could forever prevent the amendment from being repealed by the other 95 percent.

The Santa Fe quintet last night trounced the Marin Junior College athletes by a score of 30 to 19, while the Richmond Odd Fellows went down before the Adrian club of Oakland by a score of 21 to 11 in contests staged on the Roosevelt waxed floor.

The Santa Fe boys were not [illegible] best form last night, [illegible] countless hole shots that they would have certainly [illegible] in one of their usual games. Neither team played first class basketball, but, nevertheless, the game furnished plenty of entertainment for the bleachers. However, in the final period the local cagers began to recover their usual shooting style and piled up a strong lead before the final whistle.

The Odd Fellows-Adrian club clash was a fairly even affair, both teams battling hard through all four quarters. The Odd Fellows succeeded in defending their goal well during the first half, but were behind by a score of 10 to 7 at half time. The teams fought on almost the same basis during the third quarter, the score being 11 to 9 for the visitors at the beginning of the final period. The Oaklanders then started planting mid-floor shots in the linker's basket to establish a wide margin by the time the game ended.

Doctor Orders Rockne To Rest

ROCHESTER, Minn., Dec. 19.—General fatigue and not a recurrence of his old leg complaint may be the cause of Knute Rockne's being registered today at the Mayo Brothers' clinic, according to Dr. C. J. Barborka, who has attended the Notre Dame coach for the past two years.

After a preliminary examination, Dr. Barborka announced that he found nothing organically wrong with Rockne. The coach, before entering the hospital, believed he was again suffering from phlebitis, or inflammation of the veins in the legs.

SOVIET LEADER REMOVED BY ORDER

MOSCOW, Dec. 19.—UP—Alexei Ivanovich Rykoff has been removed from the presidency of the council of People's Comm ssars, a post corresponding to that of Premier in European nations.

The remova' of Rykoff was upon order of the Zik, or central executive committee of the Soviet Union, equivalent to the parliament of other countries it was made known today. Rykoff probably will be removed soon from the Politburo.

Rykoff in recent months had opposed some of the policies of Josef V. Stalin, who as secretary general of the Communist party is considered the most powerful figure in Russia. He had recanted but his removal had been considered certain for weeks.

Rykoff ,whose career as a Bolshevik began more than 30 years ago, succeeded Nikolai Lenin, the "Little Father" of Communist Russia, in the presidency of the council of People's Commissars. Lenin had been a dictator when he held the post but the power shifted in the strugg'e between Stalin and the banished Leon Trotzky immediately after the death of the revolutionary leaders. Stalin succeeded to a powerful position. Trotzky eventually was exiled and Rykoff continued as nominal head of the council.

Rykoff and Stalin, however, did not agree on all points of the government's policy, particularly in regard to the pushing of the col'ectivization movement which brought peasants into a collective system of farm production and sale. With Bukharin, he objected to the rapidity with which the movement was being carried out and became recognized as one of the leaders of the so-called "right opposition."

The program presented five year old Keith Craig in two solos and a reading; Hazel Bowman in a solo; John Hays and Howard Rose in violin numbers; Dorine Dorry in two vocal solos; Billy Jane Gooding in a vocal solo; Esther Holmes in a reading; Katherine Craig in a reading.

Three year old Howard Tarr in a group of three solos; Jean Craig in a reading; Jane and Frances Kelly, three and five respectively in a duet; and Phyllis Wells in piano solos.

Plans for the class' participation in a White Christmas were made yesterday when the Sunday school of the church presents their program tomorrow night.

SHIP IN HUNT FOR FLIERS IS SAFE

SEATTLE, Dec. 19—UP— The relief ship Dorothea was safe in Ketchikan today, after fighting storms and motor trouble in its search for pilot Robin Renahan and his two companions, Sam Clerf and Frank Hatcher, according to a copy-righted story in the Seattle Star.

The Dorothea, carrying a crew of volunteer searchers for the missing Renehan and his companions, lost somewhere in the north since October 28, had trouble with its radio last night, and its oil pump did not work properly The ship's motor consumed three week's supply of oil in three days, so badly disabled was its oil pump.

The ship will remain in Ketchikan tonight while experts repair the damaged oil pump and the radio, it was said, tomorrow. If all repairs have been completed the Dorothea will continue northward in its search.

No trace of the missing fliers or their plane has yet been discovered, reports said.

PARIS PLAYBOY NOW AT THE FOX

Three women complicate the love situation for Maurice Chevalier in the star's screamingly funny comedy romance, "Playboy of Paris," in which the joyous lothario will woo and warble at the Fox-California theater today. Now the man who "Brought a New Kind of Love" to America has troubles of his own with a bevy of Parisian lights-o' love.

Maurice, gay, debonaire and dauntless, is cast as a millionaire waiter. All day he waits on the rich people of Paris, longing to take his place with them in the glamorious life of the world's fashion center. At night, transformed, he joins the throng of merry-makers in the brilliant cafes, and, with his bewitching singing, his melting love-making, becomes a favorite with all the women. His chief difficulty is in keeping his identify as a waiter secret, for he is under an iron-bound contract to continue waiting on tables for twenty years.

The pretty Frances Dee, the lucky Hollwood extra girl who soared to movie heights when chosen to play with Chevalier, enters the contest for his heart, turns the tables on a blonde pursuer and an ambitious gold-digger and snatches Maurice from his mountain of dreams. "Ployboy of Paris" is an entrancing love story built for laughs.

The comedy is held at a constant high point by the antics of the genial Eugene Pallette, whose rotund comedy provides a succession of roars, and by Stuart Erwin, the dumb Axel of "Sweetie." The women, in addition to Miss Dee, are Dorothy Christy, Ziegfeldian beauty who featured in the stage productions of "Good News," "New Moon," and "Follow Thru," and Cecil Cunningham, a character comedienne of international fame, recently seen with Ruth Chatterton in "Anybody's Woman."

Ludwig Berger's sly sense of humor went into "Playboy of Paris" to make it Chevalier's best, better than "Innocents of Paris," "The Love Parade" or "The Big Pond." The happy star sings three new song hits, "My Ideal," "It's a Great Life if You Don't Weaken" and "In the Heart of Old Paree." Those who remember Chevalier singing "Louise," "Sweeping the Clouds Away" and "You Brought a New Kind of Love to Me" won't miss hearing him croon "My Ideal."

Hoover To Get Farm Loan Bill Saturday

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—UP—A bill authorizing federal expenditure of $45,000,000 in loans to farmers of the 21 drought states completed its course through congress tonight, and will go to President Hoover for signature probably tomorrow.

In a late session after Democratic protests that the amount was inadequate, the senate followed the example of the house earlier in the day and accepted the compromise bill, which is just half-way between the $60,000,000 bill first passed by the senate and the $30,000,000 house bill.

Senate Democrats from southern states hardest hit by the dry weather of last summer protested the bill was inadequate, and also the compromise provision by which the president instead of being required to lend money for purchase of feed may do so if he thinks an emergency requires such action. Both houses' action on the bill today were without record votes.

Vote Today

The senate decided to take a vote tomorrow on the house attempt to get the senate to recede on three amendments to the $116,000,000 public works bills. If the senate recedes, the entire program of relief will be ready for Hoover's signature. The stalemate on these three amendments continued today with another disagreement of the house and senate conferees over the Couzens amendment requiring local labor to be employed on these projects at the highest prevailing prices, and two amendments granting Alabama and Georgia money for flood-damaged roads without the usual strict conditions for federal aid.

Adjournment over the holidays may be taken tomorrow night if this program is completed, but leaders anticipate it may be necessary to remain here until Tuesday.

Meet Early

The senate will meet at 11 a. m. A hour earlier than usual, in an attempt to clear up the whole situation, and also because senators, feeling about Christmas as the rest of us do, want to spend the holidays back home.

Meanwhile, President Hoover at the White House looked from this waning depression year into the prospects for next year. It was disclosed that the 1931 government construction program will aggregate $700,000,000 as compared with $253,000,000 two years ago. Then budget of work already authorized by congress calls for $525,000,000 and the public works emergency bill calls for $116,000,000 more.

As to the loaning of money to drought-hit farmers under the $45,000,000 compromise bill, Chairman Will Wood of the house appropriations committee asked the agriculture department today if part of the money should be provided at once. It will be necessary to pass an appropriation bill actually to make this money ready, but Floor-leader John Q. Tilson said he anticipated the house could complete action on that, if necessary, in something under 15 minutes.

Third Bill

A third bill which is receiving emergency treatment, the house measure to give the farm board $150,000,000 more at once for its stabilization operations, was blocked in the senate today by Senator William E. Borah, Repn., Idaho, as a leading advocate of debenture farm relief. He forced postponement of the bill until tomorrow, and Senator Hugo Black, Dem., Ala., introduced an amendment to forbid use of any of the funds in trading in futures or on margin. The board now buys future contracts.

Senate debate late today developed controversy over the removal by the conferees, on insistence of the administration forces in the house, of the senate provision allowing loans to be made for human food—a principle which Secretary of Agriculture Hyde has denounced as "almost a dole."

Conferees wrote a new section to allow advance of money for "other expenses incident to crop production," which conferees explained to the senate could include money for food if such were deemed necessary by President Hoover.

The loans authorized are for seed, feed for horses and other stock, and gasoline and oil for tractors.

Money Asked For Families Of Strikers

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—UP—Between 15,000 and 20,000 strikers and their families in the long-drawn struggle at Danville, Va., face a hungry, cheerless Christmas this year.

An appeal for funds to relieve heir misery for a day, at least, was made by well-known liberal leaders today.

A statement signed the The Rev. Charles K. Gilbert, Suffragan bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of New York; Miss Mary E. Dreier, Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach, Mrs. Daniel O'Day, Clarence E. Pickett and Dr. Worth Tippy said:

"We are faced in Danville with one of the strange contradictions of our industrial struggles. The public believes that there should be no violence, yet when no violence occurs the public promptly forgets the strike.

Strike Peaceful

"Since Sept. 29 there has been a strike in progress there because the workers were not allowed to form an organization for the betterment of their industrial condition. Workers who have been in the mill for many years were discharged for no other reason than that they had become members of the union.

"Four thousand workers have kept the faith with the public ideal of a peaceful strike and peaceful picketing, even when a police and state constabulary were brought in. The comparatively slight disturbances which have taken place have been grossly exaggerated and show evidence of outside interference.

"Now Christmas is almost here. These brave workers are still out fighting against hunger and cold and now face eviction. They are struggling for the right of all American citizens, the right to unite to better their conditions.

Workers Carry On

"From the first, wages did not allow for savings, so that the need for food and clothing was immediate. With more courage and vision than was warranted by returns, these people have fought a good fight and are still carrying on.

"Surely we won't leave their Christmas barren, their children hungry and cold and comfortless. Between 15,000 and 20,000 persons are involved. However we may feel, the 7000 children should have their Christmas. A $5 Christmas basket for each of the 4000 workers on strike would insure this. Send your bit for the Christmas basket fund to National Women's Trade Union League, 306 Machinists' building, Ninth and Mt. Vernon place N. W., Washington, D. C."

GOOD NEWS TO BE SHOWN AT FOX

All her life Bessie Love has wished that she had been in the old Keystone comedies so that she could throw pies and squirt seltzer bottles.

But her ambition had reverse English on it when it caught up with her during the making of "Good News," all-talking screen adaptation of the New York musical comedy hit, which Mebtro-goldwyn-Mayer will present tomorrow at the FoxCalifornia theatre.

In one of the scenes, Bessie shared a closeup with a nice, frothy whipped-cream layer cake. But she slipped and fell face-deep into the sticky cake and emerged in true Keystone style, wiping gooey stuff out of her eyes, ears and mouth.

"Anyway, I know now what it's like," she philosophized.

Edgar MacGregor and Nick Brinde co-directed "Good News," which is reported as being one of M-G-M's most pretentious productions of the year. The cast, which features Bessie Love, contains several of the players of the original stage production, including Mary Lawlor, Gus Shy, Dorothy McNulty and Billy Taft. Others having prominent roles are Stanley Smith, Cliff (Ukulele Ike) Edwards, Lola Lane, Frank McGlynn and Tom Jackson.

The picture, which concerns the diverting romance of a college football hero with two competing co-eds, is replete with songs and dances, the musical numbers including "Good News," "Varsity Drag," "Lucky in Love," "The Best Things in Life Are Free," "He's a Ladies' Man," "Walk Collegiate," "Flaming Youth," "Happy Days," "Tait Song," "Today's the Day" and "Girls of Pi Beta Phi." There are also five interpolated songs.

The music is played by Abe Lyman's well known jazz orchestra, this being their first American engagement since returning from a triumphant tour of Europe, where they were featured in London's Kit Kat Klub.

High spots of the picture include a spectacular football sequence, a variety of comedy situations and a lavish wedding finale filmed in natural colors.

ONE INDICTED IN BUCKLEY MURDER

DETROIT, Dec. 19. —UP— Ted Pizzino, tailor of the Bronx, New York, and former proprietor of a Detroit night club, was indicted by the special grand jury today on murder charges in the killing of Gerald E. Buckley.

Buckley, radio critic of politics and public affairs at station WMBC, was shot to death early on the morning of July 23 in the lobby of the LaSalle hotel.

The indictment of Pizzino means that he will go to trial with only the vaguest idea of what evidence the state may have against him as the indictment makes an examination and disclosure of tehhe state's case unnecessary.

Besides Pizzino, two other men, alleged members of the Pete Licavoli rum running gang, are held on murder charges. They are Joe Bommarito, former member of "Egan's Rats" of St. Louis, and Angelo Livecchi, reputed Detroit gangster. Bommarito was indicted some time ago for participation in the Buckley killing.

The indictment today climaxed two weeks of feverish activity in the grand jury chambers. The efforts of the jury seemed to be directed toward two ends—the identification of the three suspects and the arrest of Pete Licavoli, alleged leader of the gang blamed for the killing.

It was rumored that Bommarito had been identified not only as a suspect in the Buckley case, but also as a suspect in the almost fatal shooting last January of Detective Inspector Henry J. Garvin. Such is the secrecy surrounding the inquiry that neither definite denials nor complete affirmations of this report could be secured.

Pete Licavoli has never been caught. Sam La Parota, Joe Menella, Joe Lomedico, Sam Vassasalo, and Jack Lpino, all reputed Licavoli gangsters, were captured in a raid last night. Menella was held for grand jury questioning and the others on charges of carrying concealed weapons.

Woman Flier Dies Of Hurts

TONOPAH, Nev., Dec. 19.—UP—Injuries received early this week when her airplane crashed from a low altitude caused the death of Mrs. Claire Fahy, Los Angeles flier, widow of Lieutenant Herbert Fahy, here today.

Lieut. Fahy was killed while testing an airplane in the middle west a year ago. Mrs. Fahy was departing for Los Angeles after an air circus here and when her plane was 50 feet off the ground the motor failed.

An airplane owned by William Gibbs McAdoo that had been brought here to be used as an ambulance plane for Mrs. Fahy took her body to Los Angeles late today.

Army Doctor Trial Is Nearing Jury

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Dec. 19 —UP— Silence fell over a thronged Federal court room here late today while Ernsine Wyman, a youthful assistant United States district attorney made the first appeal to a jury of rural Kansans that they assess the life of Major Charles A. Shepard,, who is charged with murdering his wife.

Wyman spoke for an hour and a half and was followed by C. L. Kagey, chief of the defense, who made an attack on testimony of Major Paul Hawley, attending physician for Mrs. Shepard, who performed an autopsy on her and was a leading government witness.

Kagey referred to Major Hawley as "the witness whose condition from liquor while on the witness stand you must have noticed, if you have any eyes at all."

He then assaulted Clara Brown, Mrs. Shepherd's nurse who today testified the patient told her "I am not going to get well. Major Shepard poisoned me."

Kagey said the nuse made contradictory statements on the stand and apparently had been hypnotized by government authorities.

While Wyman's voice droned through the room with words of condemnation for the prominent army surgeon, the Major hardly moved from his position at the defense table. His cheeks were sunken. He appeared to be weakening from the strain of the more than two weeks of the trial.

"I am at a loss from which angle to present this case to this jury," Wyman began in the unvarying tone which prevaded his entire final argument. "But it really makes little difference, for all of them lead to the same conclusion."

That conclusion, the government contends, is that the major poisoned his wife with mercury bichloride because he had met and fallen in love with a younger woman, Miss Grace Brandon, a slender, blonde-haired stenographer of San Antonio, Texas.

"While we walk together down this lane of evidence," Wyman continued, "there is another party we must take with us—Zenana Shepard, the defendant's wife. She was a woman who loved life, who enjoyed life and wanted to live. She is dead."

The attorney paused. Not a sound was to be heard in the room. A circle of witnesses, fashionably dressed men and women who had known the major, among whom were leading medical authorities of the army and relatives of the deceased woman, stared at the attentive jury.

Wyman cast aspersions on testimony by defense doctors as evasions of the true causes of death. He attacked the defense medical claim that Mrs. Shepard might have died from trench mouth, mercury poison absorbed from a mouth wash used in treatment of this disease, and that she was secretly indulging in excessive use of liquor and in use of drugs.

DRASTIC LAWS ON RUSTLERS ARE ASKED

PHOENIX, Ariz., Dec. 19.—UP—Cattle rustling, a calling that has flourished from the time of the west's first ranges, faced a new crisis today when Arizona ranchers joined in demanding the legislature enact laws to drive these gentry from the state.

It appears the laws were enacted 30 years ago when rustlers rode horses, but nowadays they drive automobiles and trucks and their activities have outmoded the statutes.

The situation, say the ranchers, has become such that it is almost impossible to catch a cattle rustler. He has too many legal loopholes. Even when a suspect is brought into court he has enough ways to prove his innocence that judges are inclined to be lenient.

In the days when Arizona's present laws were enacted, the usual procedure was to escort a rustler to the nearest tree. By contrast, Secretary Hoyt Medler of the Arizona Livestock board pointed to a recent case in which two convicted rustlers went to jail for 60 days.

The Tombstone Epitaph, lone publication of the once famous silver center of Arizona's pioneer days, grew caustic about it.

"Fifty years ago they would have lynched them," the Epitaph pointed out in its largest type.

"That sentiment may be a little strong," Medler said, "but we hate to see nearly all the rustlers get away."

A state inspector cannot enter a private corral, according to Medler. It is quite possible for a rustler to stand on his own side of a corral and admit to an inspector that the cattle therein were stolen—and the inspector is helpless.

HONOR MEDAL FRIGIDAIRE FOR XMAS

It used to be that the only notice of Christmas received by the kitchen was a lot of unusual bother connected with the preparation of the Yuletide feast.

Now, however, a little of the Christmas spirit has been diverted to the kitchen, and there among the pots and pans it will shine for days to come.

For on the shining porcelain front of every Frigidaire sold this Christmas as a gift to mother, wife or family, there will be affixed a sterling silver "Medal of Honor," attractively designed for the season, and bearing space for whatever sort of inscription the purchaser wishes. This "Medal of Honor Frigidaire" is on display at the showroom of A. G. Whittemore, local dealer, at 1412 Macdonald avenue.

"Prospective purchasers who have already seen this Christmas Frigidaire have proclaimed the idea one exactly to their taste," Whittemore said. "This medal itself is a handsome piece of work, and gives a jewel-like atmosphere to the Frigidaire.

"The Medal of Honor Frigidaire contains all the important features and engineering refinements that have cotributed to the enormous popularity of this electric refrigerator. The famous Frigidaire cold control, self-sealing ice trays, waist-high shelves, flat service top and many other advantages combine with the special Christmas feature to make this Frigidaire a perfect gift. On the majority of models the widely known Hydrator and Quickube ice tray also are standard equipment."

An Old Rule, But It Never Fails

ONCE upon a time there was a girl who wanted men friends and wasn't afraid to say so—

Because her frankly expressed desire—and also her dearth of what she sought—

Are common to many another girl of today,

We shall reprint "Estelle's" letter, and our suggestion for her

May be found useful to other young women.

"I am twenty-one," she writes, "and have lived for nine years in a small town so deadly dull

"That you wouldn't think it could exist, only twenty-five miles from New York.

"The consolation of my life is that I am studying singing—

"I love it so much that no man could make me give it up—

"I hope this doesn't sound too childish,

"But I don't think that any woman should give up the cultivation of a gift.

"However, no man has asked me to give up my singing—

"In fact, no man often asks me even to give up an evening to him,

"And this last fact is what I don't appreciate.

"I'm home every night in the week,

"Unless I go with mother or a girl friend to a nearby theater.

"I have gone out on 'blind' dates with very nice young men

"But I never see them a second time.

"Often I wish I could see them several times—,

"But, somehow or other, I seem to have no luck when it comes to men.

"I do wish you could help me!

"I'm considered good-looking and dress well.

"I'm well educated and possess the social assets

"Of a singing voice and a sense of humor.

"Most of my girl friends are either married or engaged—

"I don't go out with many girls nowadays,

"As they all seem to be busy with the male species.

"I study myself and try to see what is wrong—

"Of course, I know that, like everyone else, I have faults,

"But when I am out with a crowd I'm always gay and lively,

"And young men tell me they are glad to know me, and will see me again 'sometime.'

"The only reason I can think of for my lonely state

"Is that I live too far away.

"Several times I've attempted to have little gatherings at my home.

"But the boys always say, 'You live too far.'

"Still, Mother declares that, if a man loves a woman, she never lives too far.

"And I would say the same thing myself.

"Have you any suggestions as to what I should do

"To make myself more popular with the other sex?"

We have just one suggestion, and we hope "Estelle" won't disdain it—

Also, that it will not be met with the scornful sneers

Which certain young women have forwarded to us by mail

On other occasions when we have dared to offer a similar hint—

Heavens, we didn't invent the male sex,

And we're not responsible for its reactions, even when we record them!

The thing we'd advise any girl to do, if she really wants to enjoy more male society,

Is to learn how to cook, and then feed the brute!

Let "Estelle" ask one or two men to a home-cooked dinner—

When she knows them a bit better, let her ask them to help her cook it.

Having made arrangements, of course, to do all the tricky work herself—

But under the admiring eye of the hungry guest.

With all the new charms and talents of the intelligent modern girl,

She still makes her surest appeal, to many a man, if she knows how to feed him.

One of New York's most brilliant business women emphasized that truth

In a recent magazine article on how the successful woman can attract male society—

"Ask him to come up to your apartment for a home-cooked dinner," advised this wise woman.

A successful business man, J. George Frederick, now stresses the same point

In his useful and entertaining new book, "Cooking as Men Like It."

"One of the reasons," bluntly sets forth Mr. Frederick, "why fewer men brave matrimony today

"Is because home no longer offers them the comforts of good cookery.

"This is no idle jest.

"Just why a man should be thrilled at the idea of setting up housekeeping

"In order to suffer incompetent cookery, canned goods and delicatessen,

"And put up with a wife whose brightest idea about meals is to go out for dinner,

"Has not yet been satisfactorily explained.

"If the home and its good cheer around the board is to disappear,

"Why marry at all?

"Women have, in very large numbers, ceased to be interested in cookery.

"Young things are impudently saying today,

"'Who wants to be a conscientious housewife?

"'I want to be a business woman!'

"They hope—even expect—to marry a man who can afford to hire a servant,

"And if friend husband who cannot afford one speaks out too plainly about their makeshift cookery,

"Such women will like as not twit him about his inability to pay for service.

"As only two to four per cent of all American families can afford any household help,

"One can see how unreasonable is such an argument.

"Man loves above all else the pleasure of good food.

"I have never been able to understand why most women do not 'savor' food as men do.

"Food represents merely a technical task—often a bore—to most women.

"Woman of modern times has affected to consider food and food preparation

"As something earthly and coarse and menial.

"This is the philosophy which women should throw away as false.

"American women will be better comrades of men

"If they find a thrill together in good food.

"Since food and sex are both powerful primary instincts,

"They bear an intensely close relation to marriage and the home, the one as much as the other."

We honestly believe that Mr. Frederick expresses

The vague, undefined, but stubborn sentiments of a great many young men—

Who take food far more seriously than we or any other woman can.

We also believe that she whose other attractions have not won her popularity

Can succeed oftentimes by giving her public what it wants—what it always wants—

An appetizing, home-cooked meal.

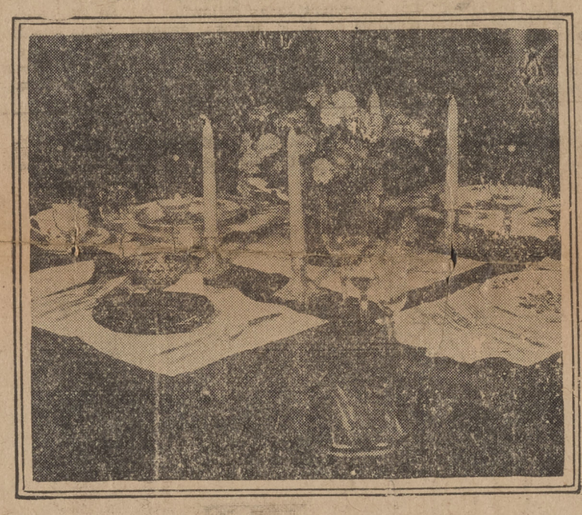
Tales That Tables Tell

By Alma Zaiss

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930



TODAY on every hand we are urged to be thrifty. But perhaps never in the history of the movement has there been such pointed insistence upon the fact that this most misunderstood and maligned word means not to hoard but to spend wisely—so wisely, in fact, that there will be plenty and to spare for all activities of the home and a bit left over to share with those who for the time being are less fortunate than we are.

Not less but more beauty, comfort and convenience than usual—at a saving—is the principle of present-day thrift. And how to accomplish it at the table was very cleverly shown to thousands who visited the recent exposition of the Home-Making Center, where inexpensive tables had been set for all occasions.

No home-maker need turn up her nose at a 10-cent table. This much was learned from the group, among which was the thrift table shown in the above picture, a gracious and altogether charming setting for which, excluding linens and flowers, not a single item used cost more than 10 cents.

There were two odd-shaped bowls of black glass to hold bonbons, and cream-colored china with a modernistic design in black and gold which was very effective. Black plates were used for dessert service, and the bases of glasses were also black. Let us go through the list to see how it tallies. Four knives, 40 cents; four forks, 40 cents; four fish forks, 40 cents; four salad forks, 40 cents; four teaspoons, 40 cents; four saucers, 40 cents; four teacups, 40 cents; four goblets, 40 cents; four wine glasses, 40 cents; four liqueur glasses, 40 cents; four plates, 40 cents; four sherbets, 40 cents; two candy bowls, 20 cents; four candlesticks, 40 cents; four candles, 20 cents; one flower bowl and frog, 20 cents. Counting linens and flowers, the appointments totaled $10.25; without, $5.80. And that was a fully equipped table—fish forks, liqueur glasses and all.

While very smart and ultra-modern, the black and gold and cream scheme in no way marks the color limit for 10-cent tables. At least three other delightful combinations come to mind. We might have, for example, green glassware and buff china with a motif in green, deep blue and a bit of orange; and use plums, grapes and tangerines in the green glass center bowl.

Or we could have pale rose-tinted glass with china of deeper rose glaze set upon cream-colored linen bordered with lines of pale blue. This time select wild chrysanthemums in pinkish mauve, bronze and gold tones for the centerpiece and use cream-colored candles. For another 10-cent table—clear white glass and china of turquoise blue used with straw-colored linen and African daisies for the center flower bowl.

With four such enticing tables spread before us—each to be accomplished with a $5 bill or less—thrift acquires a different meaning from the old one and does indeed encourage us to spend more and more wisely—instead of doing without.

Or, the polka dots may be daintier ones in the frilling and supplemented by a border row on the curtains themselves of very large and very black dots, in which case, the tie-backs should finish with a smashing bow of the rose ribbon to balance.

String color pongee makes effective curtains. They may be nicely hemmed and the color note brought out in the valance of the same material, but contrasting in color—an orange, vivid blue, willow green or carnation, for a suggestion. Tie-backs may very well be of the valance color and of its material. White pongee is an excellent substitute if a daintier effect is the preference and then the valance and tie-backs might be fashioned, again of their own material, but with splotches of gay color in an embroidery design, a geometrical pattern, a large flower design or a bouquet motif.

Organdie is charming for bathroom curtains but in this material they should be as short as possible, reaching to the edge of the window sill, but no longer and frilling is practically necessary. Moreover, organdie curtains should be very crisp and fresh looking, plain except for the frilling and with tie-backs of their own organdie. WHAT'S WHICH IN LITERATURE

LITERATURE is slowly being pounded into red pepper and powerful snuff by the editorial czars. There is no demand for beautiful short stories unless the heroine winds up in a dive and the moral is, "Girls, watch your step."

Once upon a time a prominent writer only had to dress up Cinderella in modern clothes, and he sold his stuff as fast as he could whack it out. Then the literary business switched to true confession work. To keep the wolf off the rubber doormat, fiction writers had to flop back to their private lives.

This year there won't be any "Ten Best Short Stories of 1930." There won't be ten short stories published. The market is for confessions and the low-down on your life.

Here are samples of correspondence showing why authors suffer from malnutrition:

• • •

"My dear Miss Sizzlebaum: We are sending back your short story entitled 'Judith and Her Little White Mice.' This rejection does not necessarily imply a lack of merit. It is only that our editorial requirements have altered and this won't do.

"How about writing us 6,000 words on that time the traveling salesman slipped laudanum in your coffee and you waked up in Port Said? Any little incident like this is what we want, and we are paying big prices for these manuscripts at the rate of $1.75 a pound. Yours respectfully,

"GRINDEM-OUT PUBLISHING COMPANY."

• • •

"Dear Mr. Blutz: We are sorry we cannot use your short story called 'Out in the Broad Open Air.' We think it would be better if you entitled it 'The Broad With the Golden Hair.' So far as the story itself goes, both Boccaccio and Elinor Glyn have used the same plot, and we feel it does not contain enough zip.

"If you would care to rewrite it we would suggest that you have your heroine wear rolled down stockings and flimsy clothes instead of a cowboy hat and leather chaps. Also have a city villain trick her with a glass of loaded wine in Chapter VI. Yours sincerely, DRIPP & BLAH,

"Publishers of Hot Tamale Weekly."

• • •

"My dear Mr. Hoolick: We are afraid to publish the inclosed short story as it is a little too humorous for our readers. People do not want to laugh; they want to sigh. Your story is deliciously comic and no doubt you can sell it to one of the old-fashioned magazines.

"But for our purposes it would have to be rewritten thoroughly. For instance, in your uproariously funny scene of the chase, instead of having your heroine tip over an apple cart, why not have her fall through a manhole and find herself in a hop joint, dazed and disgraced? We hope you get the idea. Faithfully yours,

"THE SPICE MFG. COMPANY."

"Dear Mrs. Wilkus: The market for bucolic stories has fallen off, we are sorry to report. Consequently we are returning your manuscript entitled 'Little Beatrice in Fairyland.' If you could make Beatrice about nineteen years old and send her through a circuit of night clubs and roadhouses, we are sure we would purchase your story at top prices.

"However, in the latter part of the yarn she would have to be drugged with a needle or opium pipe instead of being wafted to slumberland by butterfly perfume as in your original draft. In rewriting we would also suggest that you retitle the story 'How I Went From Bad to Worse,' or 'Confessions of a Lingerie Buyer,' or something like that. Very truly yours,

"PAPRIKA PUBLISHING COMPANY."

Perfumes

SOMEHOW the topic of conversation became perfumes. Yes. This is how it was. A woman passed our table, leaving in her wake a strangely sweet scent. The nostrils of our vis-a-vis quivered and he said, "Funny about perfumes. On some women they're all right, and on others they're horrible. I mean the identically same scent, you know."

"Is it the same scent? Sure?" We wanted to know, not trusting altogether the male nose in the finer points of perfuming.

"Judge for yourself. A Mandarin from Canton, no less, gave me a bottle of some rare smell once and I passed it on to a pair of close woman friends whom I happened to know at the time and told them to 'fight it out.' They both swore by the stuff. But it didn't smell a bit like the same thing when they wore it! As a matter of fact it was distinctly unlovely on one of them! . . . Mull over that one, will you?"

Did you know, Reader, that the scent of Chypre, for example, on you is quite different from the scent of the self-same Chypre on some other lady? And why? Different chemical reactions, of course. Your chemistry is altogether different from mine, for instance. Naturally, it affects our perfume.

And the point of all this is simply that the real test of a perfume's becomingness is not what you decide after sticking your nose in the phial, but the reaction when the essence comes in contact with your skin.

...ax Made ...Home

... just finished wax... ...floors very success... fully. She mixed the wax herself, and this is how she did it: She purchased a cake of beeswax for a dime and shredded it into a tin can, covered it with turpentine and placed it in the oven (not too hot). When melted she put it in a cool place until ready to use it.

The United States Bureau of Standards worked out the following formula for floor wax: 1 pint turpentine, 4 ounces beeswax, 3 ounces aqua ammonia (10 per cent strength), 1 pint water. Mix the beeswax and turpentine and heat in a dish of hot water. When wax is dissolved remove from heat, add the ammonia and water and stir vigorously until the mass becomes creamy.

As turpentine is highly inflammable, care must be taken in making this wax to heat the ingredients only by placing them in a vessel of hot water and to have no flame in the room.

On varnished or shellacked floors this wax should be applied lightly and any excess wiped off immediately, because ammonia dissolves varnish and shellac. Unfinished wood will be darkened somewhat by this wax as a result of the chemical action of the ammonia.

Cut Your Cloth Right

The Condition and Quality of Scissors Have Much to Do With Success With Synthetics

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

EVERY woman, who knows how to sew and make dresses and other garments, thinks the artificial silks or synthetics are beautiful when finished but the very dickens to cut and seam.

Rayon fabrics will cut nicely if a very sharp scissors is used. Were you to see a piece of material under the microscope after being cut by the average dull household scissors and another cut by keen blades the difference would be surprising. For the first piece would show jagged edges unevenly cut with all threads pulled and frayed.

It is reasonable to suppose that shears having cut everything from twine to asparagus shoots, that have pried corks out of bottles and clipped articles from the newspapers, perhaps been used out in the garden to cut flowers, are sadly dulled for the purposes of the seamstress.

Rough blades will pull threads in sheer materials, even when of pure silk. Also blades out of alignment have a tendency to mash the fabric instead of cutting it cleanly.

Synthetic silks have an inclination to slip when cut and can be badly damaged if poor scissors are used. Rayon resists cutting because of its strength.

The best type of scissors to use on fabrics of this kind is a bent handle trimmer seven inches long. The bending of the handle allows the scissors to lie flat so that the material is gripped at the intersection of the blades. This will not let the fabric slip down the blade and it means long, straight cuts that keep the fabric from fraying, thereby offsetting the snip-snap of constant trimming as the seam is made.

Further, the less a synthetic silk is handled in the cutting the less chance it has for fraying. The three-eighths of an inch allowed for seams by any standard pattern is quickly used up if the threads begin to pull and to fray, with the result that the garment stands a chance of being cut a trifle small in the end.

Window Seats and Book Cases

BUILT-IN bench seats around the window, and book shelves above the radiator, as well as in other sadly vacant spaces, might be just the thing for your home. Why not think it over? If you find it advisable and there are no objections forthcoming from the landlord, get a carpenter to build the desired extras immediately.

A good painter can put the finishing touches to the crude looking shelves. Or, if you are one of those people who like to do such things, you can put your own delicate touch to the wood surface. In any event, be sure it is done well and that the colors either harmoniously or contrastingly attain decorative unity to the whole.

You and Your Child

By Irma Morris

Substitutes

SEVERAL mothers were gathered in the kindergarten room waiting for the parents' meeting to commence. A few children were also present. Little Johnny was busily bouncing his ball against a blackboard in front of the room. His mother, fearing that he was annoying the women, said to him, "Johnny, stop that!" Johnny never flickered an eyelid. "Johnny, stop that ball playing," the mother repeated in a much louder tone. The child didn't pay the slightest attention. The mother was so embarrassed and flustered, that she wasn't able to figure out her next move. At that moment, Johnny's kindergarten teacher came into the room. Taking in the situation at a glance, she said to the child, "Johnny, please come back here. I have a game for you to play." The youngster immediately complied!

It is always wiser when we wish a young child to discontinue an activity to suggest something else for him to do, rather than merely issuing a prohibition. Instead of saying, "Play quietly. Don't make any noise," it is much better to supply the child with some quiet, busy work, when for one reason or another we desire quiet.

Very often one can prevent undesirable happenings by using this same principle of substitution. If we don't want our little one to write on our walls, let us give him plenty of large sheets of paper to write on, and also a blackboard. If we want to preserve our furniture, let us see that our child has plenty of wood into which he can hammer his nails. If we want to keep today's newspaper, let us put it out of reach of small fingers, giving the little one discarded newspaper to tear. Children will not be nearly so much interested in opening our cupboards and closets if they have all kinds of boxes, which they can open and close to their heart's content.

Whenever possible, let us anticipate trouble, by keeping the child busy in all sorts of healthy ways; and if occasionally a youngster does start an activity which is untimely, dangerous or otherwise objectionable, let us, instead of merely saying "Don't," substitute something else for him to do.

When Rugs Must Be Inexpensive

WHEN rugs must be inexpensive it is well to keep to the simple fabrics that give fine color and nice texture rather than to buy poor patterns.

The linen rugs come in many varieties of weave and a wealth of colors—suitable for any room in the house provided the furniture is simple. There are some exceedingly interesting mixtures of dark and light colors that are especially useful in the dining room where color is such a distinct asset. Others of quieter heather tones or mixed greens and blues are fine for the living room. And they wear—wonderfully.

The little woven rugs of basket-like texture are also excellent. They come in many combinations of color and can be worked into almost any color scheme. The Scotch art rugs in simple colors and with quiet banded borders are also excellent—and a few broadlooms and chenille come in good colors in these less expensive fabrics. Braided rugs take their place with the cruder type of furniture, but are not so satisfactory with the better articles. Indian druggets should not be forgotten. They work into many color schemes—are effective—good design—and wear well.

Rotary Club Entertained At Program

When a Richmond Rotarian is appointed program chairman of a meeting he provides the entertainment regardless of what happens, or he pays a penalty.

That was proved yesterday when Charles Renwick had arranged for the Metropolitan Opera singers to be present for the gathering in the Hotel Carquinez to render Christmas music.

Their failure to make an appearance embarrased Renwick, and he was a bit more taken aback when a fine of $20 was hung over his head if he did not provide a program in three minutes after the warning was sounded.

A program came forth in the limited time, and all declared it splendid. Eight members of the group were called upon to furnish the music, which they did to perfection.

Five members of the club were presented fowl orders, four were for turkeys and the last for a bantam rooster. T. H. DeLap, George Bush, George Edwards, A. C. Burdick were given the turkey orders while Roy Eakle the day's chairman was presented the bantam rooster.

Dr. Clifford Sweet, Oakland physician was the speaker of the meeting. His message was of the Christmas time.

Toys were presented the members by a committee headed by C. C. Kratzer.

St. George Sons Entertained At Christmas Party

One of the livliest Christmas parties ever enjoyed by the Sons of St. George in this city was given last night in Memorial hall when a large following of the Richmond membership were present at the event where candy and other edibles were present in great abundance.

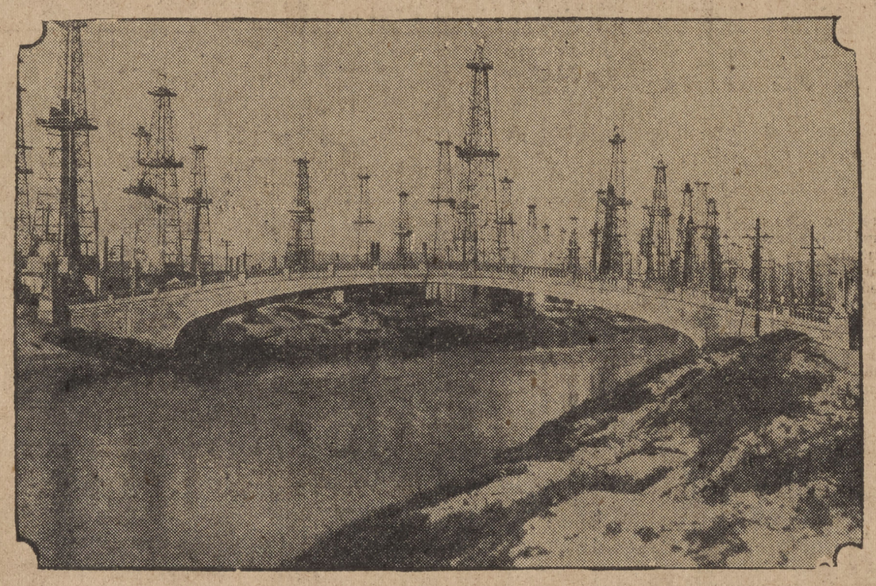
A program featured the entertainment in which Mildred and Mary Jane Rowell sang a number of solos to the accompanyment of their brother George Rowell; Sam Osborne sang a solo; Ruth Fenix sang a solo; and piano solos by Joan Castledine and Grace Bossom.

The Rev. Edwin Castledine talked on the meaning of Christmas, while John Marshall entertained with a ventriloquist act.

A dance with music furnished by Mac's orchestra was enjoyed during the latter part of the evening with Joe Baker as master of ceremonies.

Herbert Shuttleworth was chairman of the program while Jack Faulkner, Fred Powell and E. H. Collins headed the refreshment committe.

Oil Derricks Arise



WHEN THE late Abbot Kinney, former Brooklyn, N. Y., cigaret manufacturer came west and developed the Venice Del Rey district as a pleasure resort, he built Venetian bridges to span a number of canals. Now they are used by trucks hauling supplies through the oil fields.

Flat silk crepe will sell 40 percent cheaper, cotton domestics 18 percent lower, automobile tires, 14.5 percent, blankets 16, copper products 21, plumbing 10, rugs 16 and underwear 17. All other merchandise was reduced proportionately.

RECORD-HERALD—ALWAYS FIRST WITH THE NEWS

Appalling Death Toll In Rail Accidents

By RICHARD H. AISHTON
President American Railway Assn.

The price that is being exacted by waste, loss, injuries and fatalities incident to motor vehicle traffic is clearly too high. The country had paid this year an estimated sum of $3,000,000,000 as waste and loss in connection with this traffic.

This loss if evenly distributed, amounts to approximately $25 for each American citizen and member of his household. It is three times the amount of the annual salaries of the teachers in the public schools, and about one-half more than the entire sum that is being spent every twelve months for the maintenance of the public school system.

It is three-fourths of the costs of all of the activities of the Federal government, twice the costs of all of the activities of the state governments, exclusive of road building and maintenance and one half of the cost of government for all of the local, municipal, county, township, village and special jurisdictions in the country.

Large Amount

This sum approximates the interest on the combined funded debt of the federal government and all of the states and municipalities in the country. It is equal to two-thirds of the annual operating costs of all of the railroads of the country, and to four percent of the estimated total annual income of the American people.

In the face of the magnitude of this loss it becomes important that the civic business and public interests should lend the most practical ,constructive and determined effort to the solution of the traffic problem.

The American home is directly concerned in this situation. It is perhaps the greatest sufferer, economically and socially, from the 31,000 lives a year that are being cnuffed out in traffic accidents. Within the family circle are the heartaches and hardships that come with traffic fatalitiees and injuries, and only too often in the removal of its means of economic support and maintenance.

The railroads have contended with the burden of the traffic problem, through grade crossing accidents, almost from the advent of the first automobile. This burden has now expanded and reached into every phase of the nation's economic activity. Grade crossing accidents still are a vital yet comparatively limited part of the whoel problem.

Action Asked

The national conference on street and highway safety at Washington, of which the American Railway association is a member, after exhaustive study and investigation has laid down four lines of approach to a solution of the traffic enigma, but dependent for realization upon the organized and sympathetic cooperation of the states and municipalities, and of the civic, social and economic units that make them continuing organizations.

First, action by the states and cities for the creation and maintenance of adequate streets and mechanisms of traffic control that will make them safe and reduce to a minimum the hazard to life and to the operation of vehicles. This effort should extend into the residential districts where children play in the streets and pedestrians cross them at random.

Second, education of every one in the safe and proper use of the streets, and the development of a clear sense of personal and individual responsibility on the part of every person who uses the streets and highways. This is essential to the protection of life and property and strikes deeply at the root of the traffic accident problem of today.

Uniform Laws Asked

Third, the exercises of the public authority in a fearless and impartial manner in the administration and enforcement of laws and regulations that govern the use of the streets and highways. Without even-handed enforcement all measures for relief from the traffic problem, and for the greater protection of human life, must fail in their objective.

Fourth, uniformity in the laws of states and the ordinances of cities and towns, to the end that regulation and control may be as simple as practicable, easily understood, and more willingly obeyed by the drivers of vehicles and by pedestrians.

In its final aspect, apart from adequate facilities, the traffic accident problem comes down to the simple proposition that operators of vehicles must be allowed to use the streets and highways only when they show their willingness and ability to do with safety to themselves and to others, and when they maintain their vehicles in a safe operating condition. Effective public supervision is essential to this end.

Waste Problem

Education of the public in matters affecting the safety and the expeditious movement of traffic is likewise necessary. It embraces children in the schools, pedestrians on the streets and roads, and the drivers of vehicles.

The objective of education, which is a vital part of solution, must be to develop in the drivers of vehicles a consciousness of the public streets and roads where it may do injury or cause death.

The National Conference on street and highway safety has prepared the uniform vehicle code as a pattery for the states in shaping simple and effective traffic laws. Features of this code will come to the attention of the 44 state legislatures that meet soon, and their consideration should have the united and urgent support of every civic, social and business interest.

The model municipal traffic ordinance, which conforms with the uniform vehicle code, has been prepared for acceptance by municipalities. The value and urgency of uniform rules and regulations in towns and cities is a generally recognized factor in the situation. There has been much progress in putting this ordinance into operation, but there is still much to be accomplished before the full benefits of uniformity from the standpoint of cities and towns are realized.

States Adopt Law

States which have adopted laws with adequate provision for the licensing of vehicle operators after examination and driving tests, have practically all had after a sufficient length of time, a lower accident and fatality rate than they had before, and a lower rate of accident increase than is found in those states which have not adopted such laws and measures.

Careful and elaborate studies indicate that a drivers' license law, with mandatory examination of new drivers, may be expected to reduce motor vehicle fatalities by about 25 percent. This is a saving of one in each four lives now lost, and the conclusion is based on the records before and after of the states that have such laws, and with the elimination as far as possible of all the variable factors in each state.

States are faced today with the necessity of building larger and safer highways, and the towns and cities of readjusting their street systems, especially where more than two streets join at an intersection, to meet the increasing demands of traffic.

Wider Streets

Cities and towns are confronted with the need for wider through streets and by-pass routes to permit proper segragation and routing of traffic and its expeditious movement. Intelligent zoning and planning to meet the traffic necessities of today, ad the demands that may reasonably be expected in ten, twenty and even fifty years, must be given consideration and carried into effect.

The traffic problem merits the attention of every American community. Its adequate and permanent solution rests in the degree of serious and intelligent study which each community gives to it, and the measure of service that each legislature renders in passing uniform and scientific laws for effective administration and control.

Trial Of Ship Captain Opened

HONOLULU, T. H., Dec. 19.—Reminiscent of older and hardier days when iron men strode wooden ships was the tale unfolded today by Charles Adamson, ship's carpenter aboard the three-masted schooner Tusitala, which docked here after a journey of 82 days from New York.

Adamson is testifying before the United States commossioner, charged bruatality on the part of Capt. James P. Barker and First Mate Thomas Hughes. Because he failed to address the mate with the customary "sir," the carpented said, he was cursed at by both men and knocked out by a terrific blow from the veteran skipper's fist.

The ship's officers tried to place him in irons, Adamson said, but were unable to find the key that unlocked the chains.
